

Jazz Piano Benefit Concert

Stephanie Trick has performed at Peace Haven for years – long before achieving international acclaim on the jazz piano scene. And even now, between festivals across the U.S. and Europe, she still stops by Peace Haven to graciously share her talent for the pleasure of our guests. This past year she was with us twice for solo concerts that featured her piano skills in traditional jazz piano, Ragtime, and her specialty of Harlem stride piano. She also played hymns and carols for the special Christmas program.

Stephanie's inspired idea for a benefit concert was realized in January. She was joined by her good friend and musical collaborator, Paolo Alderighi of Milan, Italy. Paolo's repertoire favors traditional jazz and swing, so they complement each other beautifully. They each played a solo set, then joined together for a series of duets. They were superb! Principia's Ridgway Auditorium rocked with the enthusiasm of more than 300 delighted listeners. Their talents brought in more than $8,200 for Peace Haven, including contributions from several supporters who were not able to attend the concert. We invite you to visit our website www.PeaceHavenAssociation.org for photos and a video clip of Stephanie and Paolo playing "The World is Waiting for Sunrise" by Ernest Seitz. The concert was such a success that Stephanie and Paolo have already suggested a sequel for next year.
